eBay Live! 2007

by Kathy

Volume 2, Issue 5, June 2007

What's red, blue, yellow, and green and sells all over? It's eBay, and at the annual eBay Live! conference thousands of eBay users gather to network and learn more about this worldwide online marketplace. This year buyers and sellers alike, novices and seasoned pros, converged on the Boston Convention and Exhibition Center June 14-16, and I was excited to attend.

Did you know that one business sells millions of dollars' worth of new shoes on eBay? Did you know that another business sells pink hardhats and safety accessories for women? Just when I thought I knew what eBay was all about, I learned something entirely new. I met buyers and sellers from around the world who deal in everything from diamonds to dishes. I was reminded that anyone can do eBay, geek or technology-challenged!

The Volume Keys (Laptops)

Just like your cell phone, sometimes it's not appropriate to have your laptop's sound turned on. How do you quickly quiet a noisy notebook? Look for the volume keys — they typically have a picture of a speaker on them. You can turn the volume up and down, but most importantly you can mute the sound entirely with one press of a key. Check out your laptop's manual to find these keys on your notebook.

The Random Resource

...because your computer isn't just for computing

Google is more than just a place to search the web. With their iGoogle service, you can have your own customized home page with your Gmail mail, weather, and news — but that's not all. Additional add-ons include games, quotes, and even a virtual aquarium. Get started at www.igoogle.com.
